As a professional in both the software and media industries, I was quite dismayed to see how paper thin the restraints against Microsoft are in the current settlement agreement.

MS will not be constrained from continuing its predatory practices in bundling or pricing, and will still have free reign to stifle competition on a variety of fronts.

I think it is a grave disservice to the American computer industry and consumers to allow this settlement to proceed as planned.

If we cannot topple the monster with this attempt, what hope does any future attempt have?

A dissatisfied consumer and vexed industry professional,
